My Life in Conservation

From Nature Conservancy to the University of Hawai'i

a journey with Suzanne Case

Director, UH Office of Land and Ocean Conservation Futures

Thursday, August 29, 2024

Sinclair Library Honu Conference Room (or via Zoom)

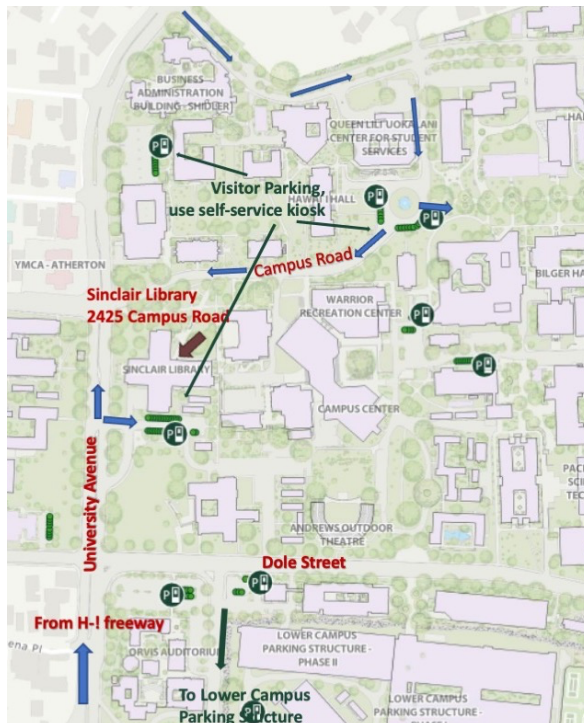

From aquatic resources to watershed protection, veteran conservationist Suzanne Case brings extensive experience in Hawai'i environmental policy and practice to her latest role as inaugural director of the University of Hawai'i's Office of Land and Ocean Conservation Futures. The Hilo-born Punahou graduate previously spent 28 years with The Nature Conservancy and 7 years as chair of the Board of Land and Natural Resources and director of the Department of Land and Natural Resources. She has co-chaired the Sustainable Hawai'i Initiative, Hawai'i Climate Adaptation and Mitigation Commission and Hawai'i Invasive Species Committee and served on the state Board of Agriculture and Kaho'olawe Island Reserve Commission.
